Soon after she met Dr. Gregory Raymond, Jodie Byrne grabbed a rubber mallet in his office and destroyed her partial denture, with the Franklin dentist's blessing.

"Teeth just flew everywhere," Raymond says with a laugh. "Jodie said goodbye to that old partial."

In November, Raymond hand-picked Byrne, 23, of Indianapolis, from more than 60 other applicants to participate in a free smile-makeover campaign Raymond dubbed Circle City Swan Makeover.

She ended up with a free makeover worth $23,000.

Raymond's idea to give a beautiful smile to a Hoosier without an attractive grin came after he saw a friend provide dental work on the ABC show "Extreme Makeover."

Raymond studied smile-makeover training with a dentist at the Las Vegas Institute for Advanced Dental Studies.

"You don't have to be a Hollywood star to have a great smile," Raymond says. "And it doesn't have to be an extreme makeover to be dramatic."

Byrne's smile was ruined when she lost three front teeth at 12 years old.

"I was ice skating," Byrne
